

Meeting rooms are typically designed for productive meetings of small groups of up to ten participants.

Convincing Information - Outstanding Conversations

In the work and discussion situations located here, the focus is on direct communication with the participation of all those present.

Presentation and discussion phases can change at will. The information base must be available at the push of a button.

The technical equipment of the room should be flexibly adaptable to this situation. Monitor systems should be chosen in such a way that access to the presented content is guaranteed from all places - or, in addition, the possibility of joint cooperation.

Room for Decisions

In work phases where no access to visual information is required, monitors should be retractable to create free space, reduce distraction and ensure a direct, unimpeded flow of communication.
